BATH

Britain's Historic Spa

BATH, the Roman Aquae Sulis, is Britain's oldest and most famous Spa.

The hot springs—the only hot springs in these Islands—which rise at a temperature of 120 degs. F., yield a constant daily flow of half-a-million gallons of the most highly radio-active mineral water in this country.

The Roman Baths, dating from about A.D. 54, form the finest group of Roman remains in Britain.

Bath is essentially an 18th Century city, a most perfect example of the civic planning and dignified architecture of that decisive period in English social development.
